

On the Road

With Road Scholar

We're starting off the New Year with a program you won't want to miss, especially if you like to travel, experience different cultures and meet interesting people. Jill Swaim, a Road Scholar Ambassador, will be our guest speaker, and present a sampling of the educational travel adventures available through Road Scholar. Many of you are familiar with Road Scholar which is a program created by Elderhostel, Inc., the world's leading not-for-profit educational travel organization providing learning opportunities specifically for adults.

With 65,000 domestic and international programs in some 150 countries, Road Scholar has a destination and interest for just about every taste. Approximately 100,000 participants join the non-profit each year and afford themselves of the high-quality and affordable educational experiences. You could be one of them.

In Road Scholar's early days, interest was spread rapidly through word-of-mouth, from one friend to another. As Road Scholar Ambassadors, Jill and her colleagues continue this tradition today by sharing Road Scholar with the people in communities all over the country. She is a seasoned Road Scholar participant who volunteers her time to present informative talks on the many wonderful travel adventures that await you as a Road Scholar participant. Some of you may be able to add to her comments from your own experiences. Come and join us for an enjoyable and interesting afternoon!
