

BLACK HISTORY Told Through Quilts

The Skirball Cultural Center is currently running an exhibit called Fabric of a Nation: American Quilt Stories. It features quilts and coverlets by more than forty artists that bring to light stories that enrich, deepen, and complicate our understanding of the American experience. This exhibit shows us a rich, complex, and often overlooked history of North America as told from individual experiences manifested within the tradition of quilt making.

In honor of Black History month, we will be featuring those quilts from this exhibit that focus on the black experience in America. You will see these amazing works of art and hear their stories all from the comfort of your own living room.

Join us on Zoom for an illuminating and moving introduction to some amazing works of art. You will not be disappointed that you joined us!
